Kappa Alpha Theta Fraternity, founded at Indiana Asbury College (DePauw University) Greencastle, Indiana, on January 27, 1870. The first Greek-letter fraternity known among women.

My brother died last month, my older brother, my only brother. He was too young to die; there were still things to do, life to enjoy. But it was not to be.

My brother was a teacher, a college professor, but he was my teacher long before that. He was my idol. I looked to him for all the things one learns as part of growing up. That's not to say we always agreed or that he was perfect. I can remember how upset I was when he told my parents I shouldn't date Jerry — or Jim. Or when he chose my college. But he was right every time.

It took me years to get over being afraid of the dark because he used to jump out from behind doors and play Frankenstein. He scared me nearly to death so many times, I wouldn't go into a room unless someone first turned on the light. But he taught me other things as well.

When he came home the first time from college, he introduced me to a wonderful new food. I suppose the big city folk knew about pizza, but no one in our little country town had heard of it. Since there were no pizza stores in Frankfort, we used Chef Boyardee. Not quite the same as Pizza Hut.

He taught me to love classical music and opera. Some things he taught by doing first and getting in trouble with our parents: like smoking and not studying hard enough that first year in college. And finally, he taught me how to die, keeping his sense of humor until the end. We laughed about how permissive our parents were. They permitted us to be home by 10 p.m. and to do our homework every night.

Ahead of their time, they were big believers that listening was the most valuable part of communication. We were frequently called in, told to sit down, shut up and listen.

Everyone should have an older brother or sister. There is something so special about that relationship. After he was gone, people came to tell us how much he had touched their lives, but I already knew that. Any time we influence young people, we touch lives. It made me think how fortunate I am to be a Theta, for isn't that what the fraternity system is all about? Being a big brother or sister.

Sometimes I think all of us, national officers and undergraduates alike, have forgotten the brother/sisterhood aspect of Greek life. The national officers forget that older brothers and sisters can teach by doing the wrong thing as well as the right and that sometimes teasing, pranks and fun occur. But the undergraduates have forgotten the most important aspect, that even when these things go on, there should always be love, that we must assume responsibility for our younger brothers and sisters. Too many seniors move out of the chapter houses and wash their hands of underclass members. All of us are teachers.

My older brother died last month, but I still have a blood sister and hundreds of other sisters in Theta who care. I'm a lucky person.

Loyally,

Message from the President

Summer, to me, is a season of anticipation and promise. It is a time for celebrations and planning. Weddings and graduations set thoughts toward future goals. It is a reflective time to review the past and dream of new beginnings.

As a parent, I remember the excitement, tinged with anxiety, we experienced when I sent our children to that first day of kindergarten, high school and especially college. I know I needed to let go—to trust that our daughter and son would be able to face the challenges that awaited. Support was strong at home, but would support be with them away from home?

Life on college campuses is becoming increasingly competitive. Student populations continue to grow, classes are full and the student-teacher ratio growing. So many choices are available, each demanding of time and energy.

Membership in Kappa Alpha Theta offers today's women the opportunity to further develop independence and attain leadership skills to succeed in our competitive society. Because our organization is for women of similar values, it offers an atmosphere to mature, to try new ideas and to receive support in efforts to learn and grow. In the 1990s, our existence on university campuses fulfills this need.

Supporting one another, our collegiate women have stepped forward to meet the risk management guidelines and to plan events that do not include alcohol. Several chapters have accepted the challenge to protect the environment and started recycling programs.

Theta is as important in 1991 as it was in 1891. Our longevity and our success are a result of receiving highly qualified women into our Fraternity.

To ensure the continuance of well-qualified candidates for membership, every alumna must do her part. Take a few moments to introduce your niece, neighbor or babysitter to the Theta chapter at the university she will attend. Recommendations that arrive early—before rush begins—will enable the chapter to find comfortable discussion topics, helping to create an atmosphere for the chapter and your friend to know each other.

Theta alumnae have a responsibility to recommend women to Theta. It is the college chapter's responsibility to select its members.

Even though I no longer have children in school, I celebrate the past year and eagerly look forward to the fall.

Loyally in Theta,

Everything Is Up To Date In Kansas City

I feel it is my obligation to respond to the letter written by the working member of the Kansas City Alumnae Chapter that appeared in the spring 1991 issue. For over forty years, the Kansas City Alumnae Chapter has held general meetings at night, during the day and on weekends. In 1990-91, 75 percent of the board meetings and 70 percent of the general and social meetings were held "after hours" in a considerable effort to accommodate a wide-spread and diverse membership.

Our dues envelopes allow all 1,395 members to indicate interest in the Chapter in a variety of ways. After an initial follow-up is made, it is up to each individual to decide her degree of involvement. Employed or unemployed, active participation in any organization requires some sort of commitment — time, effort or money, and it has to be given freely and willingly to receive the enjoyment membership can bring.

As part of the alumnae culture of Kappa Alpha Theta, I encourage all of you to pay your dues, read your newsletters and become aware of existing opportunities for involvement locally and within the college communities nearby.

Last Word On Class Letters

Ruth Wolfe Harley, in the Winter 1990-91 issue, wrote to you asking if any other Theta group had kept a round robin letter going longer than hers of 45 years.

My mother was Gladys Halter Rang. She graduated from Gamma deuteran chapter at Ohio Wesleyan in 1910. She participated in two round robins for 64 years, until her death in 1974.

At that time the remaining members of both letter groups still were forwarding the letters promptly and enthusiastically.

Unfortunately, I have no way of knowing how long they were able to keep writing to each other beyond that date.

Barbara Rang Schafer

Beta/Indiana

All of Beta Lambda/William and Mary class of 1936 participated in a round robin started within two years of graduation. The seven living members still continue it.

Major Ann Cummings, USA Ret.

Beta Lambda/William and Mary

We would like to report that in 1929, our group of Rho Thetas from the University of Nebraska started a round robin letter that has continued to go around ever since that date. We think that we have beaten Gamma deuteran's record.

Chairman Argument Continues

I was disappointed to see the Editor's note following Heather MacPhail's complaint in your spring '91 issue about the magazine's sexist language. Unfortunately, the insistence on "chairman," even though justified by the National Association of Parliamentarians, portrays the sad fact that men still predominate in positions of power.

Is it not the obligation of women's groups such as Theta, if they are truly dedicated to serving women, to question the standards through which women have been marginalized? And since we are all inscribed in language, is language not one of those standards? I have seen wonderful testaments to women in your editorial content, especially in the personality profiles of Thetas. I sincerely hope you will consider couching them in non-sexist language.

Kathy Peters

Delta Xi/North Carolina

All Thetas don't think alike; maybe it's simply a matter of age difference. I refer to the letter which described the "sexist language" which took issue with the "outdated use" of the masculine "chairman."

The letter states there has never been a Kappa Alpha Theta "chairman." Well, by the same token she can say there has never been a Kappa Alpha Theta "freshman" — the Thetas were all "freshpersons."

I think this fuming over our language as it has come down to us is ridiculous. "Manhole" must now become "person-hole" if we are to be consistent.

Marjorie Van Evera Lovelace

Tau/Northwestern

I agree with Heather MacPhail. We as Thetas are in a unique position to change sexist editorial style. If the National Association of Parliamentarians determines that we are all chairman, I would respectfully request that their address be listed in your magazine for a massive mailback.

As CEO of a company, I do not answer to Madam Chairman or Chairman.

Beth Sartor Obermeyer

(I want) to comment on the letter from Heather MacPhail of Beta Pi/Michigan State who complained about "chairman," when all the time she belongs to the "first Greek-letter fraternity known among women." On more than one occasion over the years — more than 60 — I have had to defend that — and gladly, I should add.

Collegians

Last fall Iota Chapter became the first sorority at Cornell to install a Faculty Fellow program. Vice-President Efficiency Cristina Guerola initiated the program to improve relations between faculty members and Greeks. Theta's faculty fellow, Margarita Suñer, is a professor in the linguistics department and has attended dinners and discussion sessions with members. To further promote the program among Cornell faculty, the chapter is planning a faculty tea this spring.

Gamma Rho/Santa Barbara gave over $1,000 to CASA following an annual Ice Cream Social. The chapter has also maintained its standard of excellence by achieving, for the second consecutive quarter, the highest GPA among all Greek chapters, as well as the entire female student body.

Christina Guerola, Iota, and Margarita Suñer, the chapter's Faculty Fellow, began the innovative program at Cornell University.

At Beta Delta/Arizona, Debbie Ray developed an excellent idea to raise money for CASA. Ray wrote letters to various Theta chapters requesting them to send her a campus or Theta-designed T-shirt. Twenty-nine T-shirts, including one from Canada, were received and auctioned. Every shirt was sold, with the highest price paid for a Princeton T-shirt ($30). The total amount raised was $432.

Beta Psi/McGill raised over $2,000 for the Montreal Neurological Institute by cycling non-stop for 48-hours. In January, Beta Psi Thetas participated in "Cycle for Epilepsy," taking turns canvassing and riding stationary bikes for half hour, hour and even two hour shifts in the lobby of McGill's Student Union Building. The money raised will go toward the hospital's new epilepsy monitoring unit.

Kim Alexander, Zeta Kappa/South Carolina, served as an intern from May to December 1990 for the Governor of South Carolina, Carroll A. Campbell.

Alpha Omicron/Oklahoma was recognized by the Cleveland County CASA Inc., Okla. for its generous time and effort supporting CASA. In November 1990, Thetas planned and executed a Walk-a-thon donating the proceeds to CASA.

Eleven Theta collegians participated in the Semester at Sea program in spring 1991. The program allows 500 students from schools in the United States and abroad to travel around the world. Emily Davis and Dawn Jorgensen, Phi/Pacific, Sally Bindley, Tau/Northwestern, Kathy Setzer, Delta Zeta/Emory, Christine Kennedy, Beta Tau/Denison, Christy Bieber, Beta Iota/Colorado, Wendy Greenbery, Epsilon Kappa/Dartmouth, Stephanie Gray, Alpha Sigma/Washington State, Anne Dudley, Epsilon Omicron/Randolph-Macon, Heather White, Lambda/Vermont and Tracy Tripp, Delta Phi/Clemson, experienced diverse cultures through the voyages of the S.S. Universe.

Eleven Theta collegians from across the United States participated in the Spring 1991 Semester-at-Sea program, which includes home stays and visits to universities and historic sites in various countries.

Gina Tolleson, Gamma Delta/Georgia, was crowned Miss World in London this past fall at the 40th annual event. Tolleson, from Spartanburg, South Carolina, is majoring in Broadcast-Journalism at the University of Georgia. During 1991 Tolleson will be traveling around the world attending fund raisers, social engagements and fashion shows. She will also appear on several talk shows, including the Arsenio Hall Show. Chapter members say that Tolleson's persistence and confidence are an inspiration to all.

Alumnae

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency presented a Gold Medal for Exceptional Service to Dianne Groh, Delta Xi/North Carolina in December 1990. This is the highest honor award given by the Agency — only five individuals were chosen from more than 17,000 employees. Groh was recognized for her outstanding national and regional leadership in the Toxic Release Inventory Program, as well as for her personal commitment to making the EPA's Community Right-to-Know-Program an effective force for pollution prevention.

Harold and Jeanne Rounds Olsen, Alpha Sigma/Washington State, were the first couple to be honored with the Weldon B. Gibson Distinguished Volunteer Award, presented by their alma mater for bringing about meaningful changes in higher education.

Jeanne Rounds Olsen, Alpha Sigma/Washington State, and her husband Harold were awarded the Distinguished Volunteer Award by Washington State University. Jeanne Olsen is the first woman to be recognized for the highest honor by the university Foundation. She has been on the advisory board of the College of Home Economics, a member of the Board of Regents and was one of the original trustees of the Foundation. Additionally, Olsen has served as a board member for the Seattle Symphony and as an information specialist for the Bureau of Human Nutrition and Home Economics for the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Vermont Chapter Sponsors Hazing Seminar

Lambda Chapter Thetas co-sponsored a seminar titled "Hazing: What are the Consequences?" with the University of Vermont Campus Student Activities Office. The guest speaker was Eileen Stevens, founder of CHUCK (Committee to Halt Useless Campus Killings). The following letters show that it was an effective seminar.

Dear Friends at Theta,

I want to take this opportunity to share my special experience with your Lambda Chapter on January 23. They were responsible for bringing my message to the UVM campus community and did such a fine job! Attendance was excellent, and the feedback has been very positive. Theta women have set a fine example of the "consequences of hazing," and the positive direction a chapter can take. Their leadership and strong anti-hazing position has been noticed by everyone at UVM, and it is evident that they have earned the respect and admiration of every Greek on campus.

I appreciate their efforts to educate and raise awareness. I truly enjoyed my short time with these special young women and will remember their sincerity and ideals for a long time to come.

*Sincerely,
Eileen Stevens*

Dear Thetas:

The audience is silent and tense as Eileen Stevens, the mother of a son who died in a hazing incident, tells her story. People are nervously shuffling in their seats as guilt and a story that hits too close to home is revealed.

No one looks around, afraid to confront each other and reveal the truth. Tears come to my eyes, tears for Mrs. Stevens, tears for her son Chuck, and tears that I am part of the reason for Mrs. Stevens speaking here at UVM. For the first time, I am hit with the realization of what could have happened the night of our hazing incident. What we did: blindfolding, going to a fraternity, encouraging drinking, seemed so innocent. No one was hurt, nothing bad happened, the pledges even said it was fun. But now I realize why it was such a big deal. Chuck Stevens' fraternity brothers didn't plan on his death. They thought they were having fun and everything was alright. I'm sure they don't feel that way now. No one plans on accidents, but when they happen you realize your mistakes. Luckily, no great mishap had to occur before we realized the extent of our hazing and it's possible consequences. It's what could happen, not what does happen, that matters.

This whole incident has been quite a learning experience for myself and Lambda Chapter. I have opened my eyes and seen all that I accepted as tradition was actually hazing passed down from pledge class to pledge class. Just because everyone has always done it, doesn't mean it's OK. The time has come to break the chain of tradition. Already I can see through this pledge semester, the Inspiration Week activities, and the numerous seminars we've held, that the times are changing, and hazing, as it is discovered, is being done away with. I can't speak for anyone else, but as far as I'm concerned, this hazing incident and its impact will remain with me forever.

*Kristi Allen
Lambda/Vermont*

Nationally recognized speaker Eileen Stevens addressed a capacity crowd at Billings Theatre at a anti-hazing seminar sponsored by Lambda Chapter.

The Fraternity congratulates Lambda Chapter, which was placed on probation for hazing, on its efforts to educate its members and other Vermont Greeks about the hazards of hazing. On the national level, Theta has produced as part of its Balanced Woman Series a video: "Hazing: Break the Tradition." There is an accompanying discussion guide to facilitate conversations at the chapter level to determine what constitutes hazing and what does not. This program has been sent to all chapters, to Greek advisors on campuses where there are Theta chapters and to the other women's fraternity headquarters.

The article, "Hazing: Sororities Do It Too" was featured in the autumn 1990 issue of The Kappa Alpha Theta Magazine to inform alumnae that hazing is not just a problem for men's fraternities. As Suzanne Woodruff, Director of Member Education, says, "Hazing is a problem that threatens every campus and every Greek chapter. Hazing incidents not only destroy whatever positive Greek image has been developed by hard work, they undermine the very principles on which fraternities and sororities were founded." The Fraternity believes that collegians and alumnae must work together to end this dangerous and degrading tradition.

Zeta Mu Chapter Installed At MIT

The status of women has certainly changed since 1870 when Bettie Locke persevered for an equal education and her own fraternity for women. We take for granted now the rights and privileges of equality for which Bettie and the women of her time could only hope. However, while we as women, have earned the right to be treated as equals with men, there are still many obstacles to be overcome.

The women at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology know about these challenges, as they fight sexual stereotypes to study non-traditional fields at their non-traditional school. Their spirit and dedication are similar to Bettie Locke's. They are willing to take on challenges and pursue their dreams in spite of adversity. Thus it is appropriate, that on September 21, 120 years later, 56 MIT women formed the Zeta Mu Colony. On this same day, local alumnae shared in the excitement and celebration of a new beginning. The Boston Metropolitan Alumnae Club was officially installed as a chapter.

Representing four countries and 22 states, the women of Zeta Mu comprise a diverse but unified group. These bright and motivated women are active not only in their studies but also in many other student organizations ranging from ROTC and Student Council to Musical Theater and Varsity Track. They take courses in subjects that boggle the mind: differential equations, aquatic chemistry, and kinematics and dynamics. As you can imagine, their daily schedules are packed with classes and meetings. It is hard to believe that they even had the time to face the challenge of organizing a new chapter.

But just as the founders of Kappa Alpha Theta did not give up when ridiculed nor when expanding the Fraternity became difficult, the Zeta Mu founders met each obstacle head on. Their first priority was to establish a firm foundation for the future. This included formulating goals and objectives, establishing a sound cabinet of officers, developing the bonds of sisterhood, and, of course, continuing to learn about the Fraternity. Without the benefit of tradition, they used their own creativity to incorporate the ideals of the Fraternity into all aspects of the organization.

Service

To demonstrate their commitment to service, Zeta Mu devised a 10 hour per semester service requirement. Every woman is encouraged to volunteer in the Cambridge and Boston community as well as in the many service projects on campus. Thetas helped staff a community Haunted House, co-sponsored a canned food drive with Figi fraternity, had award-winning participation in consecutive blood drives, and are planning a campus-wide Carnival for Fall 1991. In addition, Zeta Mu and the Boston Metro Alumnae Chapter pledged to help staff and raise money for the Boston CASA Convention in April. Zeta Mu has also required that four of the 10 service hours each year be donated to CASA in some way.

Scholarship

MIT Thetas don't need much motivation to study. Some would say that it is harder to get MIT students OUT of the library

Colony Thetas Monica McConnell, Marnie Hausauer, Teresa Woo and Jennifer Healey performed a skit about Theta sisterhood during inspiration week.

Theta's Zeta Mu Chapter became the fifth women's group established at MIT. Fifty-six women were initiated.

than to get them in. However, scholarship programming is still a priority for Zeta Mu. To keep members motivated, study breaks were frequent, programs were pertinent and comprehensive, and consistent recognition was given to high achievers each week. At the Model Chapter Meeting on February 10, many members were recognized for their overall performance as well as individual accomplishments. The composite chapter GPA for the fall 1990 term was a 3.84 - but wait; MIT is on a 5.0 scale. There were 11 members with a GPA of 4.5 or higher, and one woman, Kelly Stengel, was a straight A Theta.

Sisterhood

Zeta Mu focused much of its efforts on developing sisterhood and friendship. As Bettie Locke had envisioned, the Zeta Mu members greatly appreciate the support network of fellow women at their school. With the percentage of women students hovering at 33, Theta has served particularly well at MIT as an avenue to meet other women and foster female bonds. They strived, in spite of each woman's individuality, to make the colony a cohesive group. They had weekly kite sisters, big sister twin stars, two fantastic retreats, and, of course, fraternity mixers and a wonderful winter semi-formal. To establish bonds with Theta alumnae, they invited alumnae to be big sisters throughout pledgeship.

Installation

All of their hard work and dedication culminated with Inspiration Week, initiation and installation at the Cambridge Marriott February 4-10, 1991. During Inspiration Week, members expressed their thoughts and feelings about Theta. Activities included a sister appreciation night, a skit on Theta topics, a social with local alumnae who shared their Theta stories and a fireside focusing on everyone's perceptions of membership in Theta. Zeta Mu felt honored to be initiated by the installation team: Grand President Janet Peters, Grand Vice-President Development Sue Blair-Sheets, Alumnae District Presidents Suzanne Sarles and Mary Margaret Aprile, College District President Kathy Schweer, College Regional Direc-

The finale of the weekend was the banquet during which friends, family and university dignitaries gathered at the Marriott Hotel to celebrate Zeta Mu's installation. Theresa Fuentes, colony president, summed up how the new chapter viewed itself: "Change is a sign of progress, a sign of growth, and a vehicle for knowledge. We, as women, have had to embrace and sometimes even force change in order to progress to our present state. The women who make up Kappa Alpha Theta Fraternity are exactly the breed of woman unafraid of reaching out and creating a path where none existed previously. The colony members of Zeta Mu recognized this fact, saw this same character within themselves, and came together to form, in its 120th year, the 120th colony of Kappa Alpha Theta, founded as a chapter on February 10, 1991...Today begins the history of the Zeta Mu Chapter. But it is we gathered here today, who made history as a colony and who will always and forever be remembered as the founders of Zeta Mu, unafraid of change."

Bettie Locke would have been proud.

Men and Women Work Together to Manage Risks

FIPG is the umbrella organization formed to combat alcohol misuse, hazing, sexual abuse and unsafe fraternity housing.

It has been a little more than a year ago since Kappa Alpha Theta joined the Fraternity Insurance Purchasing Group (FIPG) and endorsed the risk management policies and standards established by that organization. During that year, we have announced our participation in FIPG through The Kappa Alpha Theta Magazine, we have held workshops with chapter officers at Grand Convention, we have conducted training classes for our chapter consultants and we have visited individual chapters to make presentations and listen to the comments and concerns of collegiate members.

When Theta first joined FIPG, Council believed that our participation could make a difference in our members' behavior, that we could convince our collegiate members that underage drinking could and should be eliminated. We also believed that FIPG policies regarding ongoing risk management efforts were worthwhile. We believed that we were

Members, who feel no obligation to exhibit responsible behavior, place our entire Fraternity at risk.

"doing the right thing" by joining efforts with other men's and women's groups to protect our members and our Fraternity.

After 12 months of participation, Theta leadership still believes that we can make a difference and that continuing our efforts is vitally important. However, after one year of defending and discussing our membership in FIPG, I am convinced that much remains to be done.

Although we hear success stories from some chapters, I wonder about others. Are some members working diligently to circumvent our policies, FIPG guidelines and even state and federal laws to allow underage drinking? If so, they continue to place themselves and the Fraternity at risk. These actions open the Fraternity to increased liability exposure and fail to make the undergraduate college experience safe for our members. This is of great concern.

For many years, fraternity women believed that the alcohol problem belonged to the men; we had policies preventing alcohol use on chapter property. However, fraternity women were oftentimes the contributors to delinquent, excessive behavior in the men's fraternity houses. Progress has been made, but it is disturbing to hear reports that some sorority women refuse to attend fraternity parties if no alcohol is provided or if fraternities are attempting to abide by FIPG policies.

Kappa Alpha Theta cannot continue to care for these women who do not care about Theta. Members, who feel no obligation to exhibit responsible behavior, place our entire Fraternity at risk. It is unfair to allow these irresponsible members to jeopardize Theta's future. Kappa Alpha Theta believes that the risks created by irresponsible members of any Greek group threaten the existence of all Greek groups. Already, entire Greek systems have been abolished on several campuses.

We must continue to make progress toward responsible behavior on campuses by assisting our host institutions with programming, education and enforcement of risk management standards. It is through a renewed dedication to a partnership with the host institution that we will be able to make changes to ensure a safe climate for our members and in fact, to ensure the survival of our Fraternity.

The issue of risk management is not solely the responsibility of our collegians. The Fraternity is asking alumnae to be aware and supportive of Theta's commitment to risk management. As mothers, older sisters, advisers and returning alumnae, you can do much to help our collegians understand the necessity of curbing excessive behavior, protecting their sisters and caring for the welfare of our Fraternity. Be certain that you uphold state and federal laws and do not provide alcohol to minors.

In 1990 four women's fraternities joined with the men's groups as members of FIPG: Kappa Alpha Theta, Alpha Chi Omega, Alpha Xi Delta and Delta Gamma. We are pleased to report that Alpha Epsilon Phi has recently joined FIPG, bringing the total number of Greek organizations to 34. At this point in time, clearly the majority of all undergraduate Greek men and women fall under FIPG or similar rules and regulations.

Through the combined efforts of the men's and women's fraternities, we can go a long way toward making our campuses and chapters safe for our members, and we must do all in our power to place Kappa Alpha Theta in a secure position for the future.

National Presidents Show Concern

In October 1990, the presidents of the National Panhellenic Conference organizations agreed unanimously to the following position statement, which is binding on all college chapters.

Position Statement on Alcohol

Because of our concern for the health and well-being of our members, the presidents of all 26 National Panhellenic Conference (NPC) groups have agreed to the following:

1. that we are opposed to the misuse of alcohol;
2. that all college chapters, all individual members, and all guests must abide by federal, state/provincial, local, college/university laws and regulations;
3. that it is inadvisable to host a party involving alcohol when the majority of guests attending are under the legal drinking age;
4. that no college chapter funds may be used to purchase alcohol. (Co-sponsors of social events are potentially liable regardless of how the expenses are shared.)

Each NPC group has an alcohol policy and is expected to abide by it. In addition, the presidents expect their chapters to respect the regulations of any NPC co-sponsoring group.

We hope that this agreement will give college chapters the courage and ability to initiate discussion and formulate a Panhellenic stand on the subject of alcohol.

Theta Connection Program

Have You Connected?

The Theta Connection Program (TCP), established in 1982, is a career resource network that connects job-seeking Thetas with professional Thetas. We now have the career information of more than 2,000 Thetas listed in the international career data bank at Kappa Alpha Theta Central Office.

Theta Connection Program Directory

Theta sisters of all ages who are entering the job market or moving to new locales can use the TCP Directory as a networking resource. Please keep in mind that this directory is not a job placement service, nor is it an advertising vehicle for individual Thetas' businesses. TCP is a career resource network designed to put Thetas in personal contact with other Thetas. It is one more link in the chain of sisterhood.

A Reminder

Theta Bylaws prohibit use of Theta lists for commercial purposes. The women listed in the TCP Directory have submitted information voluntarily to help other Thetas. It is very important that this service not be misused. It must not be used "for commercial purposes, for non-fraternal charitable appeals, for fraternal appeals or for the advocacy of personal opinions." (Rule XI, Section 1)

The TCP Directory Contains:

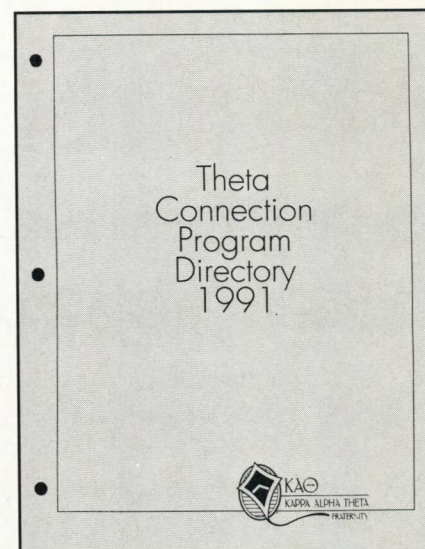

Professional Listings

Names are grouped by Occupation Categories. Each listing begins with the Theta's member number, followed by the college chapter name. The next lines contain her full name and address, followed by the job title provided by the individual on the Career Data Form. In many cases, the Theta's business address is listed as well. Within each category, listings are clustered by zip code.

After finding desirable listings, it is up to you to make the connection with a personal letter. We advise you to also send a resumé if you have one. A sample letter and suggestions for making successful connections are included in the directory.

Career Connectors

A local Career Connector in an alumnae chapter or club can provide personal contact in a specific locale. Her copy of the directory may have additional listings. She can provide information about the local alumnae organization and its activities for professionals. She can help define metropolitan regions. Remember, it is not her role to find jobs but to provide contacts and information.

TCP Home Base

In some areas Career Connectors are willing to help job-seekers find a place to stay while on an interview. They are marked in the directory with an asterisk next to their name.

International Connection

Last summer the International Connection Directory was introduced to connect traveling Thetas with those living and studying abroad. The 1991-92 directory will be available in August.

Lynne Cheney

Chairman of the National Endowment for the Humanities

President Bush recently presented his ambitious plan for troubled elementary and secondary schools. Called "America 2000: An Education Strategy," this national blueprint has in mind a complete overhaul of the U.S. education system. One of the people responsible for implementing this plan is Lynne Vincent Cheney, Beta Omega Theta from Colorado College. As Chairman of the National Endowment for the Humanities, Cheney is responsible for encouraging and supporting new initiatives in educational projects that may revolutionize American education.

It seems an unlikely role for a Casper, Wyoming, head baton twirler, cheerleader and homecoming queen, who married the captain of the football team. But Cheney was also a top student at Natrona County High School and graduated with highest honors from Colorado College. She holds a masters degree from the University of Colorado and a doctorate in 19th century British literature from the University of Wisconsin. She is also the recipient of several honorary degrees.

She has taught at several colleges; been editor of The Washingtonian; written a history of U.S. House leadership with her husband, former minority whip of the House and current Secretary of Defense, Dick Cheney; and authored two novels and several special reports as Chairman of the NEH.

During her terms as Chairman, Cheney initiated the NEH/Reader's Digest Teacher-Scholar program, which allows schoolteachers to undertake a full year of independent study in the humanities and created distinguished faculty chairs for undergraduate teaching. Under her direction, the NEH established institutes to help school teachers and college professors learn more about such foreign languages as Russian, Arabic and Chinese and a $1.5 million research center at the University of California, Los Angeles, to study the way history is taught and learned in U.S. schools.

In a personal interview, Cheney talks about her background, politically correct ideas and some of the changes she would like to see made in American education by the 21st century.

When you graduated from Colorado College in 1963, most women were still getting married and staying home to raise a family. What caused you to decide on graduate school?

It never occurred to me not to have a career. It was just very natural for me to continue my studies in English, and it suited the kind of life I was fortunate to have. I had a husband who was in graduate school; my children were born while I was in graduate school. It just sort of worked out.

Was there ever a time when you were the traditional wife and mother?

No, there never has been. I haven't always worked full time outside the home. When my children were little, I was writing, and that was something you could do at home. I was teaching part time, so it was easy enough to arrange child care on an hourly basis and not have to leave them with someone for long periods of time.

Why did you choose teaching as a career?

Well, I had some very good teachers at Colorado College, and I didn't have a lot of professional role models. When I grew up, I didn't know people who were lawyers. A lot of women go to law school now. I didn't know people who were doctors. I dealt with these people at a distance, but I didn't know them well. The first real, professional role models I had were teachers, people who had gotten PhDs in their field and gone on to teach in colleges and universities.

In addition to being a teacher, you have been a journalist and editor. Which of these jobs have you liked the most?

When I think of what I am, I always think of myself as a writer. I'm now an administrator, but writing is the one thing I have done throughout all of these various incarnations. It has defined the way I have taken on different jobs. One of the things I have done since becoming chairman of the Endowment for example, is to issue a number of special reports. I have written them all myself and that has seemed to me to be a very good way to clarify my own thinking. It is a device for leadership as well. It is very good if everyone knows in what direction you are trying to sail the ship.

Do you ever feel as though you have a mission in life?

Well, I have been very concerned about the state of education, not only in our schools, but also in our colleges and universities. That, probably more than any other single focus, has been the one that I have chosen while I've been here.

"The Washington Post" calls you the "promoter of the nation's intellectual life." That seems an unusual position for a former head baton twirler and homecoming queen. How did your involvement with the Endowment come about?

I never knew anyone who was an intellectual! When I was in high school, I had wonderful teachers, but the whole idea of leading the life of the mind simply wasn't one that ever occurred to me. The roads that were open for young women to excel in, were cheerleading and baton twirling and the like. Different ways of excelling were open to women then.

Did Theta play any part in your career choice?

I'm afraid not, but in the early 60s, the Greek organizations for women were a real leadership track for women. I was president of the Theta chapter at Colorado College, and there weren't many organizations that women were leading in those days. It seems to me that was very important. There was also a very strong emphasis on scholarship by Theta, and I appreciated that as an undergraduate.

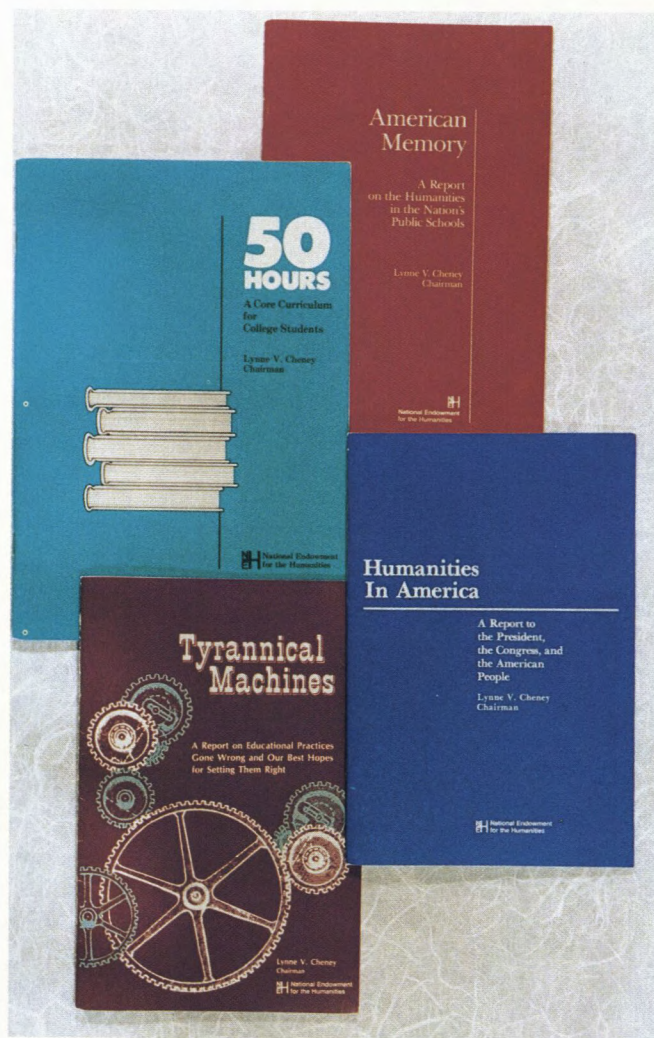

Have you ever felt being a woman was a handicap in the things you tried to do?

On the whole, I don't think it is either an advantage or disadvantage in terms of getting the job done well. I do find myself lined up against the forces of political correctness quite often, and in that case, it is very handy to be a woman. Then, it is quite all right for me to point out the errors of radical feminism for example and to suggest that the classroom is not the place to proselytize on that or any other issue. It gives me added moral force in that kind of debate.

There is a lot of talk about PCs, politically correct ideas. In his book, "Illiberal Education: The Politics of Race and Sex on Campus," Dinesh D'Souza says that incorporating non-Western courses in the curriculum is not the issue. According to the Chronicle of Higher Education, D'Souza sees politically correct ideas as an effort to insulate minority students from criticism and give them preferential treatment, which only breeds resentment among students and feeds racial tensions. He calls it a minority victim's revolution. Do you agree with this analysis?

I think that oversimplifies Dinesh's points a lot. I have been on panels with him, and we both agree that it is important to give students, not only in our schools, but in colleges and universities as well, an idea of great achievements of all people in all times and all places. But often what happens, and this is the point that Dinesh makes so powerfully, what happens is that when we look for a book to read from another culture, we don't look for the book that is great. We look for the book that is politically correct. His favorite example is the recent curriculum revision at Stanford University, which was aimed, or so it was said, at moving away from teaching Western civilization exclusively and trying to be more inclusive. But as Dinesh points out, the idea of teaching other civilizations didn't mean that you added the great works of Asia or the wonderful novels that have won Nobel prizes from Latin America. What you added was a book by a leftist, feminist, Guatemalan revolutionist named Rigoberta Menchu. That is also the name of the book, I, Rigoberta Menchu, and it is a politically correct book, which in no sense of the word can be called great or seminal. It has in no sense been proved over the ages to be one of those books that has captured better than any other, the essence of the human condition. But it is politically correct, and so Dinesh makes the point that often these curriculum revisions aren't what they say they are at all but they have a political intent. I think he makes the point very powerfully.

Some of the professors who have tried to make those arguments have been shouted down. I do think it has been very useful to have this phrase, politically correct, and the idea of politically correct is widely understood, not just on campuses but off campus as well. It is really about suppressing free speech, about suppressing free expression. When people begin to understand that and remember that our universities and colleges have always been bastions of free speech and free expression, it begins to put pressure on the institutions to mend their ways. No one should be hauled before any sort of tribunal or sent to re-education classes for the expression of ideas. There are limits, and the courts have defined them. When you suppress ideas that endanger other people, that is quite another matter, but we simply cannot suppress thoughts, or speech in our society. That has been one of the bases on which we have grown and thrived.

Often these curriculum revisions aren't what they say they are at all, but they have a political intent.

Continuing on the subject of politically correct ideas, some of your critics complain that you are too Western in your ideas, that you do not focus enough on multiracial, multicultural and gender mixed courses. How do you respond to these critics?

That's wrong. Exactly the opposite is correct. We support multicultural projects very often, and some of the finest and most dynamic thinking, not only in higher education but in our schools as well, is growing along these lines. We are grappling with the question of how do we continue to teach the next generation about those figures that you and I studied in school, like Plato and Shakespeare and Thomas Jefferson, as well as adding to them the figures that we now know are important. We should be sure they know about Martin Luther King. We should be sure they know about Confucius, and bringing these things together is one of the most exciting efforts that is occurring now. We support them frequently.

The one particular grant that there was some dispute about in the press was a Columbian Quincentenary project, dealing with the 500th celebration of Christopher Columbus' voyage in 1492. In later articles in the press, I point out that the proposal suggested, not not suggested, the proposal said that Columbus was guilty of genocide. It also presented a very romantic view of the Aztec culture. Now the Aztecs were in many ways an astonishing people and did accomplish architectural marvels. They had a very interesting social organization, but of course, the basis of their social organization was human sacrifice. And it was carried out extensively; so it seems a little odd to suggest that Columbus was guilty of genocide and sort of romanticize Aztec civilization.

I did not fund the proposal, which was for $650,000. When you don't give people money, particularly when it is that amount, they get a little upset. But I am quite comfortable with the decision I've made. And there have been favorable editorials for it across the country.

In 1989 the Endowment commissioned a Gallup Poll to test college seniors' basic knowledge of history and literature. The results showed that if the poll had been a test with 60% as the lowest passing grade, 55% of the seniors would have failed. Do you have plans for a follow-up survey to see if things have improved?

I'm more interested now in the whole question of international assessment. How our students compare with students in Japan, Germany, France, for example. Were we to do another survey, I would like to help fund one that is international in its perspective.

Students in these countries are in the classroom more days per year than American students. Do you see the U.S. moving toward longer school terms?

We probably have to. The problem is money. There is no question but that longer school days and school years are expensive. Right now, the average Japanese youngster by the end of 12 years of education has been in school two years more than the American student. With two more years of schooling, you are going to be two years better educated. So it is a direction in which we are going to have to move. I don't look for it very soon, however, simply because of the economic status of our state and local governments, which are the primary sources of funding for schools.

Do you see the federal government becoming more involved?

I think we have already seen that. President Bush and the new secretary of Education, Lamar Alexander, have really done a masterful job over the past few weeks in setting strategy for how we can improve our schools. That is really the proper role of federal government — to provide leadership as opposed to being the primary source of funding. That has never been the case, and I think it would be a distortion of our traditional way of doing things.

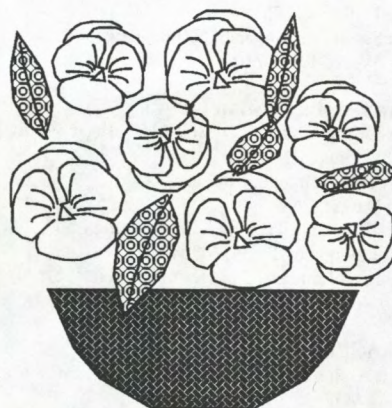

The humanities include history, philosophy, criticism and theory of the arts, ethics, comparative religion, and those aspects of the social sciences that employ historical or philosophical approaches.

Business corporations are showing a greater interest in education. For example, in Dade County, Florida, the American Bankers Insurance Group set up a kindergarten for employee children, and then a year later, it spent $350,000 to construct a state-of-the-art primary school on company grounds. How do you feel about corporations getting into the education business?

I think it is very good, partly because people who have been in business bring some very useful perspectives to bear. For one thing, they are very interested in accountability. They are not likely to be persuaded by arguments that don't have evidence behind them. I think that the influence of business is one of the important factors behind the move that now exists to have national achievement tests in this country. I regard that as a very healthy tendency, but it is that business orientation that says if we want to know where we are, if we want to know if we have made progress, indeed if we want to set goals, we have to have ways of knowing where we are and how far we have come, ways that help us to achieve our goals.

You mention achievement tests. What about the SAT or the ACT? You're not in favor of them according to newspaper accounts.

No, but I surely am in favor of a system of national achievement tests. The problem with SATs and ACTs is that they are not achievement tests. They try to evaluate students without ever testing to see whether or not they have learned what the schools are trying to teach. The SAT doesn't care if you know when the Civil War was or who Thomas Jefferson was. It tries to avoid assessing that kind of knowledge. I think the SATs and ACTs send a devastating message through the system. They say that whether students learn what teachers have been trying to teach them in the classroom is not really important. What we need to do is to see if they know when the Civil War occurred and if they can use this information to write an essay or pass an examination on an important topic.

Coming from a long line of school teachers, I was brought up to believe that teaching is the most honorable and important career anyone can have. This seems to be true no longer. What

The National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH) is an independent federal agency established by Congress to support research and learning in America's cultural heritage. It provides grants for projects in the humanities.

College professors, independent scholars and elementary and secondary school teachers may apply for funding to further their research or to pursue additional educational opportunities. These may include such things as the writing and publication of scholarly texts, translations of important works in the humanities, museum exhibitions and television and radio programs. The widely acclaimed PBS series, The Civil War, was made possible through an NEH grant.

A National Council of 26 distinguished private citizens, also appointed by the President, advises the Chairman. The Council meets four times a year to review applications, which have been pre-screened by panels consisting of knowledgeable scholars and professionals in the humanities. Before submitting the applications to the Chairman, the Endowment staff comments on matters of fact or policy or significant issues that might otherwise be missing from the review. The Chairman considers the advice provided by the review process and makes the final decision on each grant.

Since its creation in 1965 through the end of Fiscal Year 1990, the Endowment has awarded $2.11 billion for more than 43 thousand fellowships and grants.

projects are being supported by the Endowment that will help improve the image of teachers today?

There are an awful lot of good teachers in our schools, and the whole question of the esteem in which they are held seems to be undergoing a healthy shift. For one thing, teachers are paid much better than they were a decade ago. Teachers' salaries have increased by at least 25 percent. That is a good thing. Also, if you look at the survey research being done on careers, there is a question asked periodically of parents: "Would you like for you child to become a teacher?" For the longest time, this was a downward plummeting trend; every year fewer people thought it was a terrific idea for their children to become a teacher, but now, it is beginning to move back up again. So I do think that we are seeing a reversal in terms of how much esteem we give teachers. That is a very good thing, because teachers should be among the most honored members of society.

Is there any special message you would like to give young Thetas?

Well, in many ways, I envy them. There are so many wonderful paths for young women to follow now. I just hope that all of them would understand how rich the possibilities are and work hard to take advantage of them.

RUSH

It all began 121 years ago...

When Bettie Locke initiated herself in front of a mirror on January 27, 1870, she established an organization based on noble ideals. These ideals continue to attract new members today.

Becoming a member of a Greek organization was probably simple in the 1870s. Rosa Redding became an initiated Theta in only four weeks. On May 16, 1879, after getting to know members of Alpha Chapter at Asbury College, Redding was offered membership. She accepted the bid on June 7 and was initiated on June 14, 1879. Soon after initiation, according to early chapter minutes, new members would participate in weekly discussions about chapter programming, the constitution and the development of the Greek system.

To recruit members, Thetas most likely talked with newly arrived girls, (and they were girls then), about the opportunity to join an organization that offered close, supportive friendships. A women's fraternity offered academic and leadership opportunities unavailable to women in the predominantly male colleges. Conversations between Thetas and girls interested in this strange new club for females sometimes took place in Greencastle homes or at picnics, called spreads in the early days.

Members would talk about a girl's academic achievement and moral character to ensure that she would uphold the ideals. The third member of Theta, Hannah Fitch, was chosen because of her first place ranking in academics, above all the men in her class.

Endorsements

Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority:

It is with great pleasure that I recommend for your favorable consideration the young ladies who are now applying for a Kappa Alpha Theta chapter in our University. They are young women of exceptional ability and excellent characters. Their organization has for years past been one of the most conservative and influential societies in this institution. They are certainly worthy of your favorable consideration.

Very truly, ELLWOOD C. PERISHO,
Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

Alumnae played an integral role in recruiting members as the number of college and alumnae chapters increased. In search of outstanding members, local alumnae would correspond with Fraternity officers and nearby chapters regarding prospective members. Recommendations, called endorsements, from campus faculty and organizations were also encouraged.

As more sororities were established, the competition for members increased. Betty Mullins Jones, an Alpha Phi Fraternity alumna, tells a story about early recruiting practices, or spiking as it was called. According to Jones, sorority women at Asbury

invites you to become a member of their fraternity and asks you to signify your acceptance by attending a tea at the chapter house
Friday at four-thirty

College raced horse-drawn buggies down to the train station to meet incoming freshmen. As the story goes, one year the Alpha Phis sedately drove through the streets, while the others spurred their horses on.

Arriving at the station, horses in a lather, the Thetas watched the new arrivals dismount from the train, each young girl wearing an Alpha Phi ribbon. It seems that the Alpha Phis had gone to an earlier station and pledged the freshmen girls before they even arrived in Greencastle.

Acknowledging the race to recruit new members, universities and Greek organizations began to search for guidelines to address concerns. In 1896 Kappa Kappa Gamma, I.C. Sorosis (Pi Beta Phi) and Kappa Alpha Theta at Kansas State University planned to "adopt some method by which rushing might be stopped (shortened)." The women's groups agreed not to confront prospective members until three months into the academic year. Other campuses followed in Kansas State's footsteps. In 1902, membership recruitment became more formalized with the establishment of the National Panhellenic Conference. To ensure fair recruitment practices among sororities, rushing guidelines were established. Designated rush periods and individual sorority party standards were developed, and simple conversations turned into elaborate thematic parties.

This fall and winter, women will again be making the decision to join the Greek system, but the rush process will be more systematic and complicated than it was for Rosa Redding. Instead of meeting informally with Greek women at an alumna's house, rushees will attend elaborate parties with quasi-professional entertainment, meet hundreds of talented Greek women and converse perhaps, for 10 minutes with a few acquaintances. From this experience, rushees are expected to appreciate fraternity aims of scholarship, service and moral growth and to understand the time commitment and the educational opportunities offered.

In 1896 Kappa Alpha Theta Editor Mary E. Wilder wrote, "...the surprising amount of attention showered upon the candidates is likely to give them very erroneous ideas of their relations to the Fraternity. . . . chances are ten to one that the prepossessing newcomer will be taken into a fraternity before having time to learn anything of the order, its history, its standing among other fraternities, the character of its members." After all these years and the increased organization and regimentation of rush, the problems are still the same. Once again, the cost, time commitment and message are coming under scrutiny.

A recent study done at the University of Southern California revealed that a large number of rushees dropped out of rush after the first entertainment party. The widely accepted belief is that today's college women are more interested in how they allocate their time between academic pursuits, work and friendships rather than how well a group can sing and dance. Therefore, it is more important to discuss values and benefits of Greek membership rather than to emphasize entertainment.

Although membership recruitment practices have changed, alumnae and collegiate commitment to selecting qualified rushees has not.

Grand President Janet Peters says, "We need to get back to conversing, introducing the rushees to Theta and allowing them to introduce themselves to us." Members and alumnae must convey how membership can fulfill a woman's needs as well as the responsibilities of membership. Conversation, skits and songs should communicate the scholastic and philanthropic aims of the Fraternity and the possibilities of leadership skills development and lifelong friendships.

You Can Become A Part Of History

Whether alumnae are teachers, doctors or family friends, they are usually the first contact a prospective rushee makes with the Greek system and Kappa Alpha Theta. Through informal conversations, like rush in the 1870s, alumnae can promote the opportunities that Greek membership offers. Alumnae can prepare prospective rushees for rush by explaining the mutual selection process, suggesting questions they should ask Greeks and encouraging them to participate in the entire rush week.

While some alumnae may only wait to hear if a relative or a friend's daughter pledged Theta, other alumnae will be writing recommendations and assisting chapters with rush workshops and membership selection. The Rush Directory (see insert) illustrates the committed support of chapter advisers, rush recommendation boards and regional advisers. In addition to local alumnae, there are special Fraternity officers, under the direction of the Grand Vice-President Membership, who can assist alumnae and collegians in the following areas: Membership Selection, Rush Training and Resources, Alumnae Personnel and Rush Development.

Which will you be...the one who sits and waits?

Or the one who gets involved and makes history?

For 121 years alumnae have helped Theta grow. Because an alumna cared, you became a Theta. Here's how you can help a young woman experience the benefits of Greek membership and perhaps become a Theta today.

- ☐ Inform prospective members of membership opportunities. Talk about scholarship, leadership, philanthropic experiences and the lasting friendships you gained through Greek membership.
- ☐ Write recommendations and legacy introductions. Your comments on a prospective rushee's academic record, activities and interests can provide a valuable rushing tool for the chapter. This information educates members and assists Thetas in developing meaningful conversation with each candidate. Forms can be found in this issue of the magazine and are available through Central Office.
- ☐ Send recommendations to rush recommendation boards and college chapters early. See Rush Directory for college chapter rush dates.
- ☐ Support a college chapter as rush or membership adviser or offer help during rush parties.

Chapter Makes A Difference

Grand Council wishes to congratulate Delta Iota Chapter for helping to develop and implement risk management policies on their campus.

Delta Iota/Puget Sound, as the only sorority on campus subscribing to FIPG, worked with the Panhellenic and Inter-Fraternity Councils to develop a joint party policy conforming to the FIPG guidelines. The entire Greek system follows the policy in an effort to reduce liability and protect the well-being of every Greek member.

Philadelphia Alumnae PH Scholarship

The Philadelphia Alumnae Panhellenic will award a $500 scholarship to a fraternity woman doing graduate work at a college or university in the five county (Philadelphia, Delaware, Montgomery, Chester, or Bucks) area during the 1991-92 school year. Those interested should write Krista L. Killen, 1020 Beaumont Road, Berwyn, PA 19312. Applications must be postmarked before August 15, 1991.

Alpha Omega Chapter collegians and alumnae gather to celebrate 75 years of Kappa Alpha Theta at the University of Pittsburgh.

Alpha Omega Shines at 75

"A 75-year anniversary is aptly named a Diamond Jubilee. And at 75, Alpha Omega/ Pittsburgh, is no longer a diamond in the rough; this chapter is a true gem," says Pamela Gatto Maher, Alpha Omega alumna. Collegiate members Debra Cohn, Gena McCarthy and Xana Smith planned the events as a special thank you to alumnae for the re-colonization of the chapter in 1988.

January 18-19, 1991, alumnae came to Pittsburgh from as far away as California to renew old friendships and share their news. Saturday morning, over 100 Alpha Omegas browsed through memorabilia displayed throughout the newly decorated chapter house. At brunch, alumnae sang old and new songs with Theta pledges. Spouses were not forgotten, as they joined the women for dinner and dancing. The dances represented the changes in style during the 75 years ranging from the jitterbug to the slide.

Special guests were CDP Julie Gilbert, ADP Lyn Simensen and Sally Reinhold, who led the recolonization effort. It was a weekend enjoyed by all. Alumnae and collegians shared the sentiments of Debbie Cohn, when she said at the closing, "See you again in 25 years to celebrate our 100th anniversary."

Beta Nu Chapter Renovates House

The combination of traditional and contemporary styles transforms Beta Nu Chapter's living room into an elegant meeting place for a variety of activities.

Beta Nu Chapter at Florida State University was greeted in the fall of 1990 with the completed renovation of its main foyer, living room and library. "The transformation is stunning," said Sally Organ Hughes, Beta Omega/Colorado College. The old interior was a hodge podge of furniture and finishes, including Danish modern furniture and celadon green and yellow sofas.

Kimberly Marks, an alumna of the chapter, was selected for the task of designing the interior renovation which she coordinated out of her San Antonio, Texas, interior design office. "To reflect a youthful image, we selected a contemporary color palette of periwinkle blue, hot pink and green with accents of black.

Before the renovation, Beta Nu's living room was decorated in an outdated color scheme of celadon green and yellow.

Refreshing, tailored patterned fabrics incorporating these colors were used on traditional Chippendale and Queen Anne Furniture to project a young, sophisticated atmosphere for both formal and informal occasions."

House Corporation Board Vice-President Debi Parmer, Beta Nu, coordinated the design and construction of the renovation which took about five months. Her invaluable efforts paid off with the success of the project. "In the 10 years that I've served on the house corporation board this is the first time I haven't had anything but good comments!"

Renovation of the areas involved new moldings, carpeting, paint, wallcovering, draperies, light fixtures, artwork, plants and accessories. Total cost of the renovation was approximately $50,000.

An anonymous Beta Nu alumna visiting the house recently stated, "Of course they do this after I leave. . . It's absolutely beautiful."

The renovation of these key areas has been desired for many years and was always a major concern during rush. As other sorority houses began undergoing renovations, it became apparent that Beta Nu needed to update the look of the chapter house.

Fall 1990 rush was a great success for the chapter. Beta Nu achieved quota and renewed their sense of pride. Deitra Shoemaker summed up the successful renovation stating, "It's very elegant yet warm and inviting and represents all that is Kappa Alpha Theta."

College Journal Describes Life In Israel

Winner of two Mellon Foundation scholarships for creative writing, Prial has also read her poetry at the Poetry Center in Lewisburg and produced one of her plays at the Central Pennsylvania Consortium on Women's Issues. Using journal entries, she describes what it was like to be in Israel just before the Gulf War.

August 1990

On August 2, I found a crowd of people gathered around the entrance to my Hebrew class, pouring over the English language newspaper, the Jerusalem Post. "What happened?" I asked, fearing some terrorist attack. "Iraq invaded Kuwait," I was told. I think my initial reaction was similar to many Americans, a vague interest and a feeling that I couldn't really place Kuwait exactly on the map. The ignorance and complacency with which I faced the first news of the invasion of Kuwait dissipated quickly in the following week. Rumors were rampant. Hussein has attacked Saudi Arabia. No, he's moved his weapons away from the border. We're all to receive gas masks. For the third time this week, Hussein has threatened to throw the Jews into the sea. I think it was at this point that I began to understand the phrase, "paralyzed by fear." I found myself unable to concentrate in class. I couldn't write a letter. I couldn't listen to music. I couldn't even manage to smoke — I kept falling into a daze, as if my mind were confronting a smooth white wall, and I couldn't find a way to circumvent it.

I went to Be'er Sheva, the fourth largest city in Israel and a short bus ride away from the Institute, to clear my head. While walking around, I stopped in a park to sit under the shade of a tree and escape the heat. An old man in a suit and an old red knitted cap on his head was sitting there already. He offered me some dates, and we struck up a conversation. He told me that he liked to sit on that particular bench in the afternoons because the woman who ran a kindergarten across the street would bring the children here for recess every day. We chatted a bit, and as I left to go home, I realized that I hadn't thought about the crisis in Kuwait for an entire afternoon. And that the only way I could survive out here would be to live like that old man — concentrating on my life and what is going on around me, instead of being absorbed in a future no one could predict.

September - October 1990

The summer ended, and my hopes for a quick solution to the crisis in the Gulf passed unrealized. In our little enclave at the Institute, it was the Americans who were the most worried. Everyone else thought that the Americans were overreacting. I decided that maybe we were so scared because we were so unused to being frightened. Our wars have taken place on foreign soil for the most part. My Israeli friends believed war was inevitable and that the sooner it came, the better.

But Americans, I think, are very isolated. The oceans are so big — we read about wars in other lands and they make no impressions on us. The wars in our own hemisphere, even the wars we fight in close places like Panama, don't really affect us. When we had troops in Panama, no one in my hometown thought of going to the store to stock up on supplies. On the other hand, people here were used to facing war. One grocery store manager in Tel Aviv joked, after a threat from Iraq precipitated a run on his store, "These Israelis! They think war is some kind of a picnic!"

Upon completion of her Masters degree in English, Stephanie Prial left Bucknell in July 1990 to spend a year in Israel, working and studying at the World Union of Jewish Students Institute. World events cut short her stay, and she was forced to return to the United States in January.

November 1990

The government's distribution of gas masks reached the Institute. All the English speakers, about half the group, crowded into a small classroom. Several masks were on the table up front. Our instructor entered, a soldier, perhaps 18. He demonstrated how to put on the adult mask, how to adjust children's masks, and how to cover a crib. This was important for one of my friends, whose wife and infant daughter were due to arrive in February. The soldier explained that at the sound of the air raid siren, we were to put on long, loose clothes, our masks, and go to a sealed room. The gas mask kits also include atrophin syringes and purifying powder.

If we inhaled the mustard gas, we were to inject ourselves in the thigh with atrophin. "Should we take off our pants?" someone asked. The soldier held up the needle, big enough to sedate a horse or an elephant. "No," he said, "this will go right through your jeans, no problem." He explained that the drug was not an antidote; it gave you fifteen minutes to get to the hospital.

The question session lasted for an hour. Would planes be flying? He didn't know. How much warning would we get before an attack? He promised 24 hours. How long do the filters on the gas masks last? Six hours. What happens if the attack lasts longer than that. The soldier's mouth twitched, "I guess we all die." The room exploded with nervous laughter. Then we were all given the opportunity to try on the masks. Some people brought their cameras and took pictures.

That night, I lay in bed rigid, wondering about the future. Last week the air raid siren in Arad had gone off because of a loose wire. Another time, the power generator had failed, plunging the entire town into darkness. Could I really trust Arad's warning system? Or its ability to function in wartime? We had adjusted ourselves to sudden sonic booms, to artillery fire from Army practice late at night — how much more was I willing to adjust to?

December - April 1991

Christmas came very quietly this year. No snow, no colored lights, no Christmas specials. Sadly, for the Israeli and Palestinian economics, no tourists in Bethlehem either. I spent my time apartment-hunting in Tel Aviv. I might not have remembered that Christmas existed, except for the cards I received from friends in the U.S.

I came home from Israel on January 6, 1991, for what I planned to be a two-week holiday. I had heard dates set for the beginning of the war since August and felt that the January 15 deadline would also pass without an event. I had a job teaching English in Tel Aviv and had spent the last week in Israel in my new apartment there. My biggest fear about a war was that it would prevent me from returning immediately, as it did.

Sitting out the war on the other side of the Atlantic wasn't easy. I was practically glued to the TV and made many expensive over-seas calls. For my friends in Israel, things were in a sense easier. They were there, so they had to deal with the war, which meant going about their daily lives as normally as possible. My plans, on the other hand, had been interrupted, so I had nothing to distract me from worrying. It took me a while to find something new to do and to re-adjust to American life.

All in all, however, I have been very lucky. A Scud landed in my old neighborhood, about 50 yards from my friend's apartment, but caused only injuries. A few more missiles landed outside Arad, where the Institute is located, shaking the buildings but only causing minor damage. I plan to return to Israel this summer, and I'm sure I'll hear many stories from my friends.

People ask me, is it safe to return? No, probably not in the sense that it is a dangerous part of the world, and a peace plan for the entire region, especially for the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, has yet to be implemented. Yes, in the sense that many Americans live in areas more dangerous, perhaps, than Israel. I have had friends, who live in Washington D.C. and carry mace in their pocketbooks when they go to work, write me that they are worried about my life at the Institute in a small town in the Negeve Desert. It depends what you're used to, what you consider "normal."

Yes, I'm going back to Israel; it has become a second home to me. It represents my heritage and contains the possibility for my future. I want to work to find peace, to make Israel "a light unto the nations," as it is prophesied that it should be.

I'd like to congratulate you on the recent ethics issue; please keep this kind of important issue focus in future . . .

Christina Creveling
Omega/Berkeley

I was very happy you chose to offer the current theme of "ethics" for the Theta magazine. It is timely, well done, and I thought the black and white color choice very thought-provoking. I have read the magazine pretty thoroughly, and I am disappointed to find no reference to the immorality of "living together" or "cohabitation." This is an insidious practice which leaves many degrading marks on our society from unwanted pregnancies to abortions to confused children. I do not speak as a "holier than thou," because some of my own five children have been involved in this. I see the confusion that results from this practice.

I know there will be some who say "living together" is OK or part of the "new morality." . . . It would have been considered immoral (in the past) just like stealing and other issues taken up in the ethics stories. Thanks for hearing me out.

Magazine Maintains Contact With Thetas

These last several years I have been less active than in the past, but I still enjoy receiving the Theta magazine. . .

In the 30+ years since leaving college, I have lived in seven states (and have served on advisory boards in three), and always my Theta magazine has caught up with me. Since my chapter at the University of Massachusetts is no longer active, I miss reading the news of Gamma Eta, and would like to invite my sisters to drop me a line. And I promise to respond to each of you with a summary letter from everyone who writes.

Kappa Alpha Theta Foundation

Deardurff Wins CASA Program Director of the Year Award

Dayle D. Deardurff, J.D., director of the Cincinnati, Ohio, CASA organization called ProKids, is the recipient of the 1991 Kappa Alpha Theta Program Director of the Year Award. Established by the Foundation in 1989, the award provides transportation, registration and expenses for the recipient to attend the NCASAA annual conference. The balance of the $5,000 award goes directly to ProKids to be used at its discretion.

The winner has an impressive record. In nine years, Deardurff reduced by half the number of neglected and dependent children in the Hamilton County child welfare system, initiated the Adoption Issues Project, was successful in obtaining United Way funding for the agency and was instrumental in forming the Ohio Association of CASAs and GALs (Guardian ad Litem).

This energetic young woman worked with children throughout high school and college and always knew she wanted to do something for children. She received her undergraduate degree from Bowling Green and her J.D. from Creighton. After law school, she opened her own law practice but knew she had to do more. "I wanted to change the world, to do something meaningful for children. I just didn't know what," she says. When she heard about ProKids, she thought she might have found what she was seeking.

ProKids opened its doors in 1981, and Deardurff was hired to design and implement Hamilton County's first CASA program. In addition to serving as a guardian ad litem herself for the first five years, Deardurff supervised two staff members and spent every spare moment seeking funding and publicity for the program. She added the county's attorney Guardian ad Litem program to the ProKids agenda in 1983. She developed a training program, which was videotaped to bring new attorneys into the system more efficiently.

Deardurff continued to expand ProKids by bringing together the Runaway Project, the local runaway shelter and the local bar association to help abused and runaway children. This program is one of only four to be funded by the American Bar Association's National Legal Resource Center for Child Advocacy and Protection. She also initiated the Adoption Issues Project (AIP) in 1987. Using specially trained CASAs to advocate for children who are permanently removed from their parents, this concept was responsible for ProKids winning its fourth consecutive NCASAA Program Excellence Award one year later.

In addition to the impact AIP had on the lives of individual children, it proved to be a major force in effecting change in the child welfare adoption system. Policies, which were clearly not in the best interests of children, were uncovered during the research, development and casework associated with the project. Deardurff challenged these policies with detailed documentation resulting in the formation of an Adoption Task Force. Additional changes in the welfare system continue due to Deardurff's persistence.

She collaborated with the Cincinnati Bar Association to produce a brochure and video, worked with the University of Cincinnati Law School to help develop an extern course to prepare young lawyers for the guardian ad litem role, and was instrumental in the formation of the Ohio Association of CASAs and GALs.

Program development and training instruments were not her only successes. She excelled in the area of fund raising as well: receiving the largest accumulative grant ($175,000) ever made to one organization from the Junior League of Cincinnati, becoming one of the first CASA programs to receive United Way funding and membership; receiving an $18,000 grant from the Ohio State Victim's Assistance Program and procuring grants from nearly every local foundation which lists children as a priority.

But Deardurff feels her greatest personal satisfaction came from helping to create a state-wide CASA association. "Three weeks before the birth of my first child, my secretary and I were running around wildly trying to make the first day-long conference come off," she laughs. "The more all of us became involved, the more we learned that not only can we make a difference, we must make a difference." The conference brought together judges and the people who ran CASA programs, and according to Deardurff, "Since that day, we never stopped meeting." This was the beginning of the Ohio Association of CASAs and GALs.

Foundation President Carryl Krohne says, "We salute Deardurff's many accomplishments and are proud to present the Program Director of the Year Award to someone who has done so much to improve the lives of abused and neglected children."

Letter Questions Foreign Currency Policy

Dear Kappa Alpha Theta Foundation:

No mention is ever made whether Canadians should/could pay in Canadian or American funds and how anything that is ordered will be affected by duty, taxes and other "officialdom" at the border. As a result I am sending this cheque in Canadian funds as a trial to see what will happen.

In the future, you may consider sending Canadian alumnae a letter specifying the type of currency preferred/needed, and indicating any difficulties they may encounter with the difference.

Laura Prins
Beta Chi/Alberta

Dear Laura:

You're absolutely right. Nowhere in any of our materials do we indicate to our members the currency preferred by the Foundation.

There are Thetas residing all over the globe, many of whom make gifts to the Foundation restricted to scholarship or left unrestricted and therefore available to be applied to the Fraternity's educational programs.

Over the past three years, the Foundation has received gifts of yen, marks, pesos and pounds. The bank with whom we maintain a checking account converts the foreign currency to U.S. dollars and deposits them to our account. The only difficulty we have with receiving contributions in foreign currency is the delay for conversion. Usually the exchange takes only a few working days. Occasionally, it takes several weeks. Once it took six months to convert a check written on a Swiss bank account because the check did not indicate the currency. Half a year is a long time to have to have to wait for 40 "whatevers."

At any rate, Thetas are welcome to send gifts to the Foundation in the currency of their choice. Thank you for bringing this to our attention. I hope this open letter answers your question and those of our Canadian sisters and others across the world.

The Foundation

Ann Reidy, Beta Iota/Colorado, was one of five chapter consultants who telephoned Thetas across the nation in April requesting gifts to the Foundation's 1990-91 Annual Fund. More than 600 alumnae had the opportunity to talk with one of these Theta experts. Those called pledged almost $6,000 and nearly one-fourth of them registered their interest in becoming a Theta volunteer.

THETA ARTISTS

needs but a bread, and his easel, and all the rest God gives him in abundance.*

He must live to paint and not paint to live."

*— Albert Pinkham
Ryder, 1847-1917*

These words aptly describe Virginia Cuthbert Elliott and Dorothy Uber Bryan. One has painted for over six decades, and the other believes that her painting contributed to her recovery from cancer.

VIRGINIA CUTHBERT ELLIOTT

It is hard to write and hard to speak, but I can still paint," says Virginia Cuthbert Elliott, reflecting the spirit that has kept her painting for more than six decades. This 82-year old Theta artist began as a child and has been painting ever since. In 1987 she had a serious stroke, which made routine activities such as speaking and writing difficult, but it did not reduce her desire or ability to paint.

Cuthbert was born in 1908 in West Newton, Pennsylvania. She attended Syracuse University where she became a member of Chi Chapter. L. Pearle Green, author of Sixty Years in Kappa Alpha Theta, was Dean of Women at the time. Green took an interest in the young artist, and they became friends. According to Cuthbert, Green may have been a 50-year Fraternity officer, an author, editor and educator, but "She didn't know much about art."

After graduation in 1930, Cuthbert won the prestigious August Hazard Fellowship for European study. The same year, another young artist, Philip Elliott, received a similar award from Yale. While studying in Paris, the two met and fell in love. They were married in Pittsburgh in 1935 and began a life-long adventure in art and love. Philip Elliott was a teacher and mentor for Cuthbert. She says, "He was the most important thing for me, in my painting and everything else. His opinions were very important to me."

They painted together in an old barn converted into a studio in the Allegheny foothills. She became well known in Pittsburgh and was selected as one of the city's ten most interesting women "in the ten widest fields of non-domestic endeavor." She was the first woman to have a "one-man" exhibit at Pittsburgh's Carnegie Institute in 1938.

Writing about her work, Albert L. Michaels in the catalogue accompanying a 1990 exhibit at the Nina Freudenheim Gallery, said, "At this time, (1938) Virginia was a talented narrator of the American scene. Her subject matter, drawn from the life around her, depicted life in Western Pennsylvania and was typical of many American artists at that time... Virginia was a promising talent, combining technical skills, a deep knowledge of art history and an active enjoyment of life. In addition, she was married to Philip Elliott, a fine artist himself, a dedicated art teacher, a superb critic and an inspiration for his talented wife."

In 1940 Cuthbert was commissioned by the Fraternity to paint an official portrait of Bettie Locke Hamilton to be presented at Grand Convention. According to the November 1940 issue of The Kappa Alpha Theta Magazine, this was the first painting Cuthbert had done from a photograph: "It is strange how much spirit a photograph can have, and the one I used contained a great deal of spirit. She (Bettie Locke) must have been a very attractive young college girl back in 1870."

It was the frame, however, that was to lead to the recovery of the portrait after some fraternity men stole it as a prank in the '60s. Cuthbert says, "I remember before starting to paint the portrait, I hunted all over Pittsburgh's secondhand stores to find just the right frame. I wanted the frame to be from the 1870s." After the portrait was taken from its place above the fireplace in the Founders Room at Alpha, it was lost for several years. By chance, a Theta father, antiquing in the Greencastle area, liked the frame and took a closer look at the portrait. He recognized Bettie Locke and returned the painting to the chapter. The portrait now hangs in the board room of the Fraternity headquarters.

Cuthbert's subject matter and style changed when Philip Elliott became director of the Albright Art School and they moved to Buffalo, New York, in 1941. Michaels writes, "Phil was always a more stylistically experimental artist than his wife. At this time he was probably urging her to paint in a more daring and unorthodox way than the regional realism of her Pittsburgh period." In Buffalo, she left the 1930s behind and became a more daring, continued on page 38

DOROTHY UBER BRYAN

Dorothy Uber was born in Bowling Green, Ohio, in 1924. She was interested in art in high school and college, but World War II interfered with her plans to study art. She entered Ohio Wesleyan in 1942 and became a member of Gamma deutron Chapter of Kappa Alpha Theta. There she met young Ashel Bryan, a Phi Psi senior, who was going off to war after graduation. The two were married in September 1943, and art was forgotten until the children were grown. At 45, Dorothy Uber Bryan enrolled as an art student at Bowling Green State University and discovered what she wanted to do with the rest of her life — paint.

Her first lesson was to throw paint on a canvas, and when she showed the result to her husband, he was horrified. "His idea was that I would paint nice little houses and barns and become known as the Wood County house painter." Instead, with the encouragement of her professors, she focused on mixed-media abstracts.

Bryan finds excitement and adventure in her art work. She says that Bowling Green art students are encouraged to experiment, and this freedom led to one of the techniques for which she has become well known. After spray painting some wicker furniture outside her house one day, she spray-painted the outlines of some fallen leaves onto a piece of art paper. Back in the studio, she did a delicate floral overprinting with pastels and a water color wash.

It is this innovative approach that has led to exhibits all over Ohio. She has won prizes in juried shows at Bowling Green State University, the Toledo Museum of Art and the First National Bank in Toledo and has had several one-person shows.

Bryan is probably best known for her Chemo Paintings. In June 1989, Bryan was diagnosed as having advanced ovarian cancer. Looking back at her work just prior to the medical revelation, she found a sudden dramatic change. Whereas her abstracts had been delicate and pastel, they suddenly became bold and full of strong colors and broad brush strokes. Reflecting about this change, she says, "In retrospect, the first painting (of the group), done before my diagnosis, seems prophetic." continued on page 39 creative and unique artist with a growing national reputation.

Theta Profile

She became known, along with Virginia Tillou, as Buffalo's outstanding portrait painter between 1940 and 1970. The exclusive Carnegie International accepted four of her paintings, and Chicago's Art Institute's Annual Exhibit of American Painting and Sculpture also exhibited some of her paintings. Other works were shown at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, the Whitney Museum of American Art, the Albright Art Gallery, the Golden Gate International and the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts. She had three one-person shows at the Contemporary Arts Gallery in 1945, '47 and '53.

Both the New York Times and Christian Science Monitor reproduced several of her paintings. Fortune magazine, known for the industrial artwork on its covers, commissioned her to paint the Reynolds Metals aluminum plant in Arkansas. She executed sketches and a watercolor from a catwalk nearly 400 feet in the air. Furnaces kept the building at a constant 110 degrees, which frequently dissolved her paint. But the final product won a prize for one of the best commercial paintings of the year and was featured on the front cover of Fortune, June 1951. She later painted another cover for the magazine, which was presented to the Eisenhowers and hung in their Gettysburg farmhouse.

Cuthbert believes her greatest award to be a grant from the American Academy of Arts and Letters and the National Institute of Arts and Letters in recognition of her contribution to American painting. The judges characterized her work as "strong, well constructed pictures with romantic overtones." Cuthbert has traveled extensively throughout Europe, Africa, and North, South and Central America. She has had a full life, a happy marriage and received professional acclaim. In the catalogue from the 1990 exhibit she writes, "It's a compulsive thing (to be an artist). Some times it's unhappy, sometimes it's very satisfying. I wouldn't be anything else."

The three paintings shown demonstrate Cuthbert's changing style. Brown World, 1945, shows her love of Victorian landmarks, while Memories of Childhood, 1952, falls somewhere between realism and surrealism. Jungle River, 1974, is an example of her transition to a more abstract style in her later years.

The Chemo Paintings cover a six-month period during which Bryan received chemotherapy and two extensive surgeries. Her style changed with her emotions during each stage of the disease. "I have always believed painting as a personal expression can help people solve problems," she states. Her family encouraged her to title the series and show the frustration, fear and pain of fighting the disease. After six months of therapy, she was declared cancer free and says, "Once again I went to my art studio, and Happiness Is Recovery sprang from my brush. Spray can, tissue paper, and india ink helped me to create this non-objective butterfly motif, emerging and flying free."

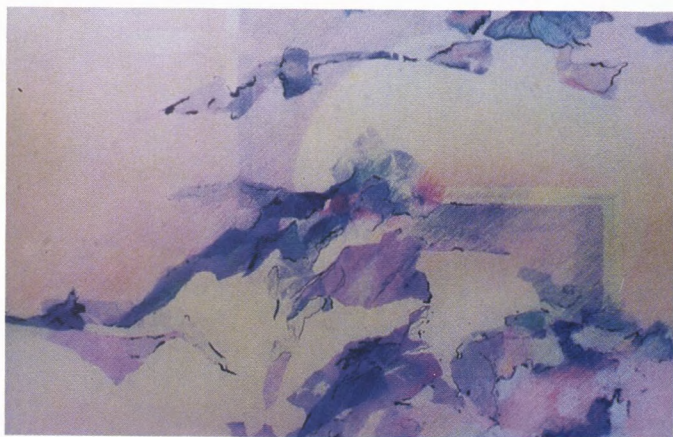

The Chemo Paintings have been exhibited at Ohio Wesleyan's Mowry Alumni Center; McFall Center Gallery, Bowling Green; and the Medical College of Ohio Hospital, Toledo. Dr. Antonia Novello, Surgeon General of the United States, has asked to hang one in her Washington office.

As a result of the Chemo Paintings, Bryan receives many phone calls from women who have cancer. She says, "For a lot of people, there was a reluctance to talk about cancer. They were almost embarrassed about having it." She is pleased that her paintings have helped to bring cancer out into the open: "These paintings created a release for me, and helped me to recover. Hopefully they have offered insight to many viewers, and perhaps some help to others. If I can help someone, then I'm delighted. I've had a wonderful life."

Bryan teaches at BGSU and received an honorary degree from the University in 1987. She was instrumental in founding the Medici Circle at BGSU, which awards scholarships and provides faculty incentives. Bryan's work with patients at the Wood County Home for the Aged has led to the establishment of a Masters Program in Art Therapy, which is acclaimed among similar courses offered in the U.S.

After the shock of her first painting, Ashel Bryan has been a strong supporter of his wife's talents. Together they have pledged $250,000 to renovate and enlarge the Bowling Green art gallery. The gallery will be renamed the Dorothy Uber Bryan Gallery and will serve as a showcase for student art.

Bryan may have come to painting later than most, but it is an important ingredient in her life. She says, "Painting gives my life a direction and an excitement I never would have had otherwise."
